Top-Notch Dual-Time Suspense from an Award-Winning Author

- “[An] excellent inspirational mystery. . . . Fans of Terri Blackstock will love this.”—Publishers Weekly on Echoes among the Stones
- Inspired by the Ringling Brothers’ Wisconsin headquarters, Wright crafts an eerie, yet redemptive tale set in the circus world
- “Wright creates an inspirational mystery with thrilling finesse.”—Booklist on The Curse of Misty Wayfair

1928

The Bonaventure Circus is a refuge for many, but Pippa Ripley was rejected from its inner circle as a baby. When she receives mysterious messages from someone called the “Watchman,” she is determined to find him and the connection to her birth. As Pippa’s search leads her to a man seeking justice for his murdered sister and evidence that a serial killer has been haunting the circus train, she must decide if uncovering her roots is worth putting herself directly in the path of the killer.

Present Day

The old circus train depot will either be torn down or preserved for historical importance, and its future rests on real estate project manager Chandler Faulk’s shoulders. As she dives deep into the depot’s history, she’s also balancing a newly diagnosed autoimmune disease and the pressures of single motherhood. When she discovers clues to the unsolved murders of the past, Chandler is pulled into a story far darker and more haunting than even an abandoned train depot could portend.

—Newsweek
- Destined for general market and CBA bestseller lists
- Author actively supports booksellers with warm, engaging social media presence

Anna is eager to begin a new chapter in her life as a Lancaster County tour guide in the picturesque area where her Plain grandmother once stayed. Anna wishes she could talk with her grandmother about those long-ago days, but the elderly woman suffers from Alzheimer's, and beyond a vague hint about an old stone wall, much about that time is a mystery. Thankfully, Martin Nolt, a handsome Mennonite, takes the young Beachy Amish woman under his wing for her training, familiarizing her with the many local highlights, including Peaceful Meadows Horse Retreat, which serves children with special needs. The retreat's mission so inspires Anna that she returns to volunteer, and she quickly strikes up a friendship with Gabe Allgyer, the young Amish widower who manages it.

As Anna grows closer to both Martin and Gabe, she finds herself faced with a difficult choice—one in potential conflict with the expectations of her parents. Will Anna find true love and the truth about her grandmother's past in Lancaster County? Or will she find only heartbreak?

After being taken under the wing of a professor who introduced him into society and named him as heir, Nicholas is living far removed from his childhood life of crime. As a favor to a friend, Nicholas agreed to help clear the name of an innocent woman, never imagining he'd be reunited with the girl he thought lost to him forever.

As Gabriella and Nicholas are thrown together into one intrigue after another, their childhood affection grows into more, but their newfound feelings are tested when truths about their past are revealed and danger follows their every step.

A Creative, Compelling Debut from a Writer to Watch

- An epistolary novel, written in the style of ABA best-sellers The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society; 84, Charing Cross Road; and The Chilbury Ladies' Choir
- The story's protagonist has a sharp mind, a sharp pen, and a big heart—if she will only let herself see it

Headstrong Johanna Berglund, a linguistics student at the University of Minnesota, has very definite plans for her future . . . plans that do not include returning to her hometown and the secrets and heartaches she left behind there. But the US Army wants her to work as a translator at a nearby camp for German POWs.

Johanna arrives to find the once-sleepy town exploding with hostility. Most patriotic citizens want nothing to do with German soldiers laboring in their fields, and they're not afraid to criticize those who work at the camp as well. When Johanna describes the trouble to her friend Peter Ito, a language instructor at a school for military intelligence officers, he encourages her to give the town that rejected her a second chance.

As Johanna interacts with the men of the camp and censors their letters home, she begins to see the prisoners in a more sympathetic light. But advocating for better treatment makes her enemies in the community, especially when charismatic German spokesman Stefan Werner begins to show interest in Johanna and her work. The longer Johanna wages her home-front battle, the more the lines between compassion and treason become blurred—and it's no longer clear whom she can trust.

Laura Callaway daily walks the windswept Cornwall coast, known for many shipwrecks but few survivors. She feels like a castaway, set adrift on the tides of fate by the deaths of her parents and left wanting answers. Now living with her parson uncle and his parsimonious wife in North Cornwall, Laura is viewed as an outsider even as she yearns to belong somewhere again.

When ships sink, wreckers scour the shore for valuables, while Laura searches for clues to the lives lost. She has written letters to loved ones and returned keepsakes to rightful owners. She collects seashells and mementos, and when a man is washed ashore, she collects him too.

As Laura and a neighbor care for the castaway, the mystery surrounding him grows. He has abrasions and a deep cut that looks suspiciously like a knife wound, and he speaks in careful, educated English, yet his accent seems odd. Other clues wash ashore, and Laura soon realizes he is not who he seems to be. Their attraction grows, and while she longs to return the man to his rightful home, evidence against him mounts. With danger pursuing them from every side, will Laura ever find the answers and love she seeks?

EXCERPT

"We shouldn't stop," Lucy said.

Olivia placed a finger over Lucy's lips and pulled her closer, dropping to a squat and guiding Lucy to do the same. They didn't have much time. Olivia listened through the life of the forest, through her own violent pulse. For this to work she'd have to move quickly.

"I need you to stay here," Olivia said.

Lucy's eyes flashed with concern and confusion. "No—"

"Listen to me," Olivia said, her tone hushed. "I'm slowing you down, they'll catch up. You have to wait here. Let me pull them away, then continue west, as fast as you can, until Texas, like we talked about."

"No, I want to stay with you," Lucy said, her voice small with fear.

Olivia's heart broke. She wanted nothing more than to hold Lucy close, save her from all that had happened and all that would come. Save her from the trouble she herself had created for the girl, a miserable mistake that would never be forgiven. Yet crouched there in the darkness, Lucy's bright blue eyes pleading with her for sanctuary, Olivia thought maybe, if she could save Lucy, just maybe she could save her own soul. She brushed back Lucy's fiery hair, placed both palms on either side of the girl's face, and forced soft words through her rising emotions.

"This is the only way, my sweet girl."

"But I don't know anything but you! I can't remember," Lucy said. Tears gathered in her eyes and shimmered in the starlit night.

"I know. I took your memories for your own protection. I know that's hard to understand, but you have to trust me, Lucy. Do you trust me?"

"I do."

"Good girl. Then do what I say now. Run west, to Corpus Christi, yes?"

"Yes."

"Find Summer Wallace, she's a friend of mine. Tell her Ollie sent you to find the robin. It's very important."

Lucy nodded.

"You can trust her. She'll help you. You must find her."

- Will appeal to readers of Ted Dekker and Tosca Lee

In 1853, Abigail Scott was a 19-year-old school teacher in Oregon Territory when she married Ben Duniway. Marriage meant giving up on teaching, but Abigail always believed she was meant to be more than a good wife and mother. When financial mistakes and an injury force Ben to stop working, Abigail becomes the primary breadwinner for her growing family. What she sees as a working woman appalls her, and she devotes her life to fighting for the rights of women, including their right to vote.

Following Abigail as she bears six children, runs a millinery and a private school, helps on the farm, writes novels, gives speeches, and eventually runs a newspaper supporting women's suffrage, Something Worth Doing explores issues that will resonate strongly with modern women: the pull between career and family, finding one's place in the public sphere, and dealing with frustrations and prejudices women encounter when they compete in male-dominated spaces. Based on a true story of a pioneer for women's rights from award-winning author Jane Kirkpatrick will inspire you to believe that some things are worth doing—even when the cost is great.

EXCERPT

Emma Daley had always loved Christmas as a child. Not so much as an adult. But that was probably because after her parents moved to the other side of the planet, she'd been spending Christmas with her best friend's family. Christmas at the Landerses' opulent Scottsdale home meant fabulous food, fancy clothes, and expensive gifts—at least from them, since Emma couldn't afford that kind of extravagance. And of course, the holidays were never complete without the usual Landers family feud.

It wasn't that Emma didn't appreciate Gillian's family and their hospitality, but sometimes she longed for something more . . . or maybe it was something less. So this year Emma had decided to do things differently. She planned to spend her holidays alone. And that was what she'd just told Gillian.

Heartwarming Christmas Love Story Set in the Colorado Mountains

All Emma Daley wants this holiday season is a white Christmas. But the young teacher and struggling musician sure can't find that in sunny Arizona. Luckily, there's someone living in a perfect mountain home in the Colorado Rockies looking to make a vacation trade this year.

Tyler Prescott is an in-demand songwriter and talented musician who put his own singing career on hold to write songs for celebrity acts to perform. When his mother convinces him to do a vacation trade for Christmas, he never imagined one of the houseguests would be so sweet—or so strikingly pretty. Naturally, he decides to stick around, and, to get better acquainted, he poses as the house's caretaker. But when Emma's friend Gillian discovers his true identity and sets her sights on him, things get . . . messy.

Fan favorite Melody Carlson is back with another delightful Christmas tale to warm your heart on those cold winter evenings.

When she hears that the small town of Heritage, Michigan, is looking for a new librarian, Libby Kingsley jumps at the opportunity. Little did she know the library is barely more than a storage closet stuffed with dusty, outdated books. What the community really needs is a new building. But the only funds available are those being channeled into the new town square, and the landscape architect in charge of the project wants nothing to do with her plans.

All Austin Williams wants to do is get the town square project finished so he can do right by the family business and then extricate himself from the town that reveres the brother who cost him so much. But the local media and the town's new librarian seem to be conspiring against him at every turn. Will the determined bookworm find her way into his blueprints—and possibly even his heart?

Novelist Tari Faris invites you back to the small town with a big heart in this second book in the RESTORING HERITAGE series.

EXCERPT

The package was ticking.

Eve Reilly froze...sucked in a breath...and gaped at the FedEx box propped beside her front door.

Tick.

Tick.

Tick.

Tick.

The sound was faint—but distinctive.

And was that...was that a wire sticking out through the tape?

She squinted.

Yeah.

It was.

Heart stuttering, she eased the door closed, snatched up the cell she'd dropped on the hall table, and jabbed in 911 as she bolted toward the back of the house.

The box definitely didn't contain anything as prosaic as the new water filters she'd ordered for her fridge.

"911. What is the nature of your emergency?"

"There's a package on my front porch that's t-ticking—and a wire is hanging out of it. I think it might be a bomb." Eve dug through the drawer next to the kitchen sink until her shaky fingers closed over the back-door key for her neighbor's house.

"I'm dispatching as we speak." The woman's voice was calm. Like she dealt with bombs every day. "I want you to vacate the premises and find cover a safe distance away until officers arrive."

"Got it." She pulled open the back door and clattered down the steps while she answered the woman's questions, trying to wrap her mind around this surreal turn of events.

Hate mail was one thing. An occupational hazard you learned to live with in her type of job.

But a bomb?

Way out of bounds.

She skipped the last step and leapt to the ground.

Maybe her sisters were right.

Maybe hosting a controversial talk radio show was a dangerous job.

And maybe, in the future, she wouldn't cavalierly dismiss the venom that was sometimes spewed at her by listeners who didn't agree with her opinions.

Radio talk show host Eve Reilly is used to backlash from her pot-stirring on-air commentary and interviews, but now it seems a disgruntled listener is resorting to more than angry words to express their displeasure. When a suspicious package arrives on her doorstep, Eve turns to law enforcement for help.

Police detective Brent Lange can't find any evidence to link the string of unsettling incidents that follows, but he's convinced they're connected. As the harassment grows more menacing, it becomes clear someone wants Eve's voice silenced—permanently.

But unless he can track down her foe, fast, the gutsy woman who is willing to take risks for what she believes—and who is swiftly winning his heart—may not survive.

EXCERPT

Signe didn't want to get dramatic, but the fate of the free world was at stake.

But first, she had to finish her cup of coffee.

Quietly. Deliberately. Nothing to see here.

Just a woman sitting in a cafe off the center square of Bad Rabbenau, a tiny town southwest of Heidelberg, watching the sun gild the cobblestones and the massive Lutheran church that overlooked the cafe. A nondescript woman in a pair of leggings, boots, a rain jacket and a hat, her blonde hair tucked up in back. And so what if she was wearing sunglasses—she didn't look any more like a spy than the man sitting across from her, with short dark hair and a blue jacket, black dress pants. He read a German paper.

Or the man who'd parked his bicycle, wearing skinny jeans and a sweater, a scarf knotted around his neck.

Or even the girl at the counter, short black hair, wearing a dress, leggings, and boots.

See, no spy here.

No dangerous information tucked away in her inside pocket, like a grenade should it make it out into the open.

No deep undercover CIA agent holding the world's secrets in her jacket. The NOC list. The list of Non-Official Covers of operatives around the world.

She glanced toward the center fountain, the four arched cherubs that shot water out of their mouths. The spray caught the sun, arched it into a rainbow.

The old story about Noah hung in her mind, just for a second. Forgiveness. Fresh starts.

Nursery rhymes and stories that had nothing to do with reality.

The bells on the church rang, scattering a grouping of pigeons, and the scent of fresh apple kuchen from the nearby bakery could make her weep if she hadn't just breakfasted with her old Doctors without Borders friend, pediatrician Zara Mueller, and her husband Felix.

Probably she shouldn't have landed on their front step two weeks ago, but she'd run out of options.

Run out safe houses.

Run out of hope, really.

Because, according to the latest news on CNN, she was also running out of time.

Ever since that fateful day, Ethan has sensed a deep disconnect between the man he should have been and the one he has become. His days play out a beat too slow, his mind replaying the scene of his failure again and again.

But when his brother's widow appears, asking for his help in uncovering what was really behind his brother's death, Ethan is stunned to hear that she and her late husband were involved in a much larger case than he knew—one that threatens the global power structure. As Ethan joins the search for answers, he will enter into his own past—and discover a means of redeeming his future.
